A Western-trained physician open to exploring Eastern medicine, Dr. Nancy Chen is a board-certified eye surgeon who brings a unique perspective and a holistic approach to both of her practices.

After pursuing a research fellowship at the Doheny Eye Institute/University of Southern California after medical school, Dr. Chen completed a one-year internal medicine internship at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York, NY, with additional research and residency training at the Center for Sight at Georgetown School of Medicine in Washington, DC and the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio, Texas.

“The field of ophthalmology and beauty and wellness is particularly exciting due to their constant innovation,” says Dr. Chen, who uses multifocal intraocular lenses in cataract surgery to improve a patient’s vision and reducing their risk of falling. While developing surgical devices to improve the safety of cataract extraction procedures in her medical practice, Dr. Chen is focused on broadening treatment choices to address ongoing health concerns in the beauty and wellness realm. “This approach naturally fosters overall health, which leads to a more radiant appearance.” Uniquely, Pua Manu MedSpa is the only med spa in the community with a medical doctor leading its team.

Having provided free eye screenings to underserved communities while advocating quality vision care for veterans, Dr. Chen is now prioritizing planetary care, initiating a project to make her surgical center environmentally friendly via reducing waste and its carbon footprint.

Through it all, Dr. Chen is deeply grateful to Kapolei and its spirit of Ohana. “I am fortunate to have gotten to know all the families of Kapolei.”
